The Mayor presented the following veto message on the ordinance establishing the market limits of the City of Austin
Mayors office Austin October 6th 1882
To the honorable members of the City Council of the City of Austin
Gentlemen

I herewith return to your honorable body an ordinance repealing section one of article 331st of an ordinance establishing the market limits of the City of Austin said ordinance having passed your honorable body October 4th 1882 without my signature for the following reasons First I do not believe a law maid applicable only to a certain portion of a municipal corporation and not affecting other portions will be held good by the courts of the Country therefore the present ordinance would only result in litigation and expense to the City without accomplishing the end for which it is intended Second I believe it against public policy to tax the necessities such as this ordinance contemplates

Third the the Charter of the City of Austin does not authorize a tax of the character mentioned in this ordinance that while it expressly authorizes the erection of Market houses establishing of markets and market places it does not any where authorize a Tax and that this if no other reason would be fatal to the enforcement of the ordinance

Fourth I am not of the opinion Citizens should be compelled to come to one central market for necessities and if no other reason could be urged against this ordinance this alone should alone should induce your honorable body not to force them to such an inconvenience I trust you may find these reasons sufficient to induce you to reconsider your former action

Very Respectfully
W. M. Taylor
Mayor
