PROPOSAL

Demolish a ca. 1935 house.

ARCHITECTURE

One-story, rectangular-plan, front-gabled frame bungalow with a partial-width inset porch on the left side of the front façade; single and paired 1:1 fenestration; ornamental metal porch post; no railing.

RESEARCH

The house was built in 1935 by Ed Britt as an investment property. It was listed as vacant in the 1937 city directory (information for that directory was gathered in 1936). The first known occupants of the house were a pair of brothers and their respective wives – Clarence and Almeta Carriage, and Joe and Bessie Carriage. Joe and Bessie Carriage had lived in East Austin prior to moving into this house, but Clarence and Almeta Carriage moved to Austin from Oklahoma. Clarence Carriage was a salesman for Paulissen Baking Company; Joe Carriage was also a salesman for the same company, which was run by Walt Paulissen. Joe Carriage eventually took over the business from Walt Paulissen, and operated it as Joe Carriage's Bakery on Red River Street from the mid-1950s through the mid-1960s.

The Carriage brothers lived here until around 1943; it was then occupied by Belle Gilcrease, a widow, who had owned and lived in the house next door at 85 Perdenales Street. She lived here until around 1948. The house was a rental unit until the mid-1950s, when it was owned and occupied by A. Harold and Lena Rowe, who lived here until the mid-1960s. Harold Rowe was a driver for the City Sanitation Department and later for the City Parks and Recreation Department. Since the occupancy of the Rowes, the house has been mostly a rental property with periods of vacancy.

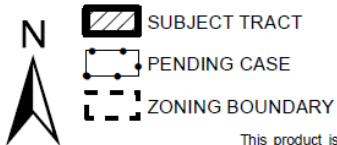

STAFF COMMENTS

The house does not appear in any City survey.

STAFF RECOMMENDATION

Encourage relocation over demolition, but release the permit upon completion of a City of Austin Documentation Package, consisting of photographs of all elevations, a dimensioned sketch plan, and a narrative history, for archiving at the Austin History Center.

The same census report shows Clarence Carriage as the 19-year old son of Victoria Carriage, who rented a house in Dewar, Okmulgee County, Oklahoma.
