PROPOSAL

Demolish a ca. 1915 house.

ARCHITECTURE

One-story, rectangular-plan, hipped-roof frame house with an almost-full-width shed-roofed independent porch on plain, square, wood posts; single and double 1:1 fenestration; bay window addition to the right side of the house.

RESEARCH

The house appears to have been built around 1915. The first known owners and occupants were William D. and Ruby Echols, who lived here until around 1919. William D. Echols was a salesman for wholesale meats, fruits, and groceries; he later moved to San Antonio, and was a government inspector. From around 1919 to around 1925, the house was owned by Leonard and Maggie Knight; he was a fireman for the railroad. From around 1925 until around 1929, the house was rented by John R. and Martha Atchison. Atchison was a meat cutter. Jacob Lindsey Kelley and his wife, Lola, owned and occupied the house through the 1930s until the mid-1940s. Kelley was a long-time city policeman. From the mid-1940s through the mid-1950s, the house was owned and occupied by Norman and Winona Payton. Norman Payton grew up on a large farm in Travis County, then worked at a variety of occupations while living in this house – he was a brakeman, then a driver for the Firestone Test Fleet, then a floor sander. His obituary notes that he was working for Lack's Furniture at the time of his death. From the mid-1950s until recently, the house was owned and occupied by Sipriano "Speedy" Arellano and his wife, Maria. Arellano was a carpenter.

STAFF COMMENTS

The house is listed in the Comprehensive Cultural Resources Survey (1984) as a Priority 2 for research.

STAFF RECOMMENDATION

Encourage rehabilitation and re-use of the house if feasible, then relocation over demolition, but release the permit upon completion of a City of Austin Documentation Package consisting of photographs of all elevations, a dimensioned sketch plan, and a narrative history, for archiving at the Austin History Center.
