PROPOSAL

Rehabilitate and construct an addition to a ca. 1927 house and demolish a ca. 1960 rear building.

ARCHITECTURE

One-story, L-plan, front-gabled wood-frame house built in a vernacular style. The house is clad in board-and-batten wood siding with a front porch and double-hung 4:4 wood-sash windows. The rear building is a front-gabled building constructed of cement blocks with louvered windows; the front windows have been boarded up.

Proposed work includes constructing a new foundation, adding a water table, replacing the roof, and repairing the board and batten wood siding and replacing it with in-kind materials when necessary. Windows are proposed to be replaced with wood-sash windows to match existing, though the applicant may be open to reusing existing windows where possible.

The proposed addition includes a gable-roofed one-story addition clad in hardiboard and stepped back from the primary façade approximately 15'. At the rear of the property, the addition rises to two stories, with vertical hardiboard cladding and a flat roof.

The rear building is proposed to be replaced with a 2-story accessory dwelling unit (still under design).

RESEARCH

The house at 1414 E. 3rd Street was built by 1927 and occupied by Eustaquio S. and Crescencia Barron, who would live there for the next 65 years. According to community and oral histories, the Barron family made and sold tortillas, masa, and baked goods out of the house from the beginning. What would become Barron Tortillas was the second tortilla manufacturer established in the city; by 1944 there were five tortilla makers. As noted below, the house held a store—likely a tortilla store—ca. 1962 that was accessible via the rightmost door on the porch. By 1992, Eustaquio's and Crescencia's daughter Manuela Barron owned and lived in the house.

The rear cement block building was built ca. 1960 and expanded in 1967. Sanborn maps from 1962 indicate that this building was used as a tortilla factory, while the southeast portion of the house was used as a store, likely to sell the tortillas. Newspaper archives did not include any mention of Barron Tortillas.

STAFF COMMENTS

The house was surveyed as part of the East Austin Historic Resource Survey in 2016 and recommended eligible for designation as a contributing building in a potential local historic district and eligible for designation as a contributing building in a potential National Register historic district.

1414 E. 3rd Street appears to meet the criteria for designation as a contributing building in a potential local historic district. The Historic Landmark Commission initiated historic district zoning for the 1400 block of E. 3rd Street in April 2017; however, no materials have yet been submitted for the application. On initial research, the property appears to meet one criteria for designation as a historic landmark; however, two criteria are required to be met for designation.

Designation Criteria—Historic Landmark

- 1) The house is more than 50 years old, having been constructed ca. 1927.
- 2) The house retains a high degree of integrity of location, setting, design, materials, craftsmanship, association, and feeling. The only change to the exterior appears to be a small rear addition in 1965.
- 3) Properties must meet two historic designation criteria for landmark designation. The property appears to demonstrate significance according to one of the designation criteria for historic landmarks listed in the City of Austin Land Development Code (Section 25-2-352).
 - a. Architecture. The house is built in a vernacular style and appears to possess architectural distinction within this style. The board-and-batten vernacular bungalow with an inset porch is no longer a common building type in Austin, and the house retains a high degree of integrity.
 - b. Historical association. The property was occupied for 64 years by Eustaquio and Crescencia Barron. There do not appear to be historically significant associations. See notes under community value regarding the Barron Tortilla Factory.
 - c. Archaeology. The property was not evaluated for its potential to yield significant data concerning the human history or prehistory of the region.
 - d. Community value. The property held one of Austin's earliest and most longstanding tortilla factories. However, research did not yield extensive information on the Barron Tortilla Factory and does not support an assertion that the property possesses a unique location, physical characteristic, or significant feature that contributes to the character, image, or cultural identity of the community, Austin, or Texas as a whole.
 - e. Landscape feature. The property is not a significant natural or designed landscape with artistic, aesthetic, cultural, or historical value to the city.

STAFF RECOMMENDATION

Approve as proposed. The proposed project retains much of the historic fabric of the house, which was the original tortilla factory and store.

Biographical Notes

Eustaquio Segobia Barron was born in San Antonio in 1893. He married Crescencia Vazquez prior to 1921 and had five children. Eustaquio and Crescencia lived on Brushy Street for a time, where Eustaquio operated a Mexican bakery and a molino de masa, grinding and selling masa for tortillas and tamales. Eustaquio is listed in city directories as a stationary fireman in 1922-24, a laborer in 1929, and a cement finisher in 1940; his daughter Fannie Barron Estrada stated in an oral history interview that he worked part-time, while her mother operated the business.

By 1927, the Barron family had purchased the property at 1414 E. 3rd Street and built a house. Beginning around 1942, the Barron Tortilla Factory is listed in city directories, though it was operating before then as a continuation of the Brushy Street business, according to Ms. Barron Estrada. The business did not advertise, but rather sold to neighbors from the surrounding area: “People said, ‘Nobody makes tortillas like Barron’s,’” recounted Ms. Barron Estrada, telling of lines of customers on weekend mornings. It also served neighbors who brought buckets of corn, then took home the masa from the molino and made their own tortillas or tamales to sell. Eustaquio ran the business until his death in 1991, when his daughter Manuela Barron took it over. After she retired, Manuela donated some of the tortilla-making equipment to a church and sold some.

Crescencia Vasquez Barron was born in Seguin ca. 1896. In 1929, she was a housewife. She ran the family business while Eustaquio was working. No additional information was located about her.

Making tortillas was a family business: Eustaquio’s uncle, Crescenciano Segovia, opened the first tortilleria in Austin in 1922 at 2nd and San Antonio streets—Austin Tortilla Manufacturing—and gave Eustaquio his first molino to grind corn.
