MARCH 26, 2018
PERMITS IN NATIONAL REGISTER HISTORIC DISTRICTS
NRD-2017-0088
1408 W. 9TH STREET
WEST LINE HISTORIC DISTRICT

PROPOSAL

Demolish a ca. 1911 house.

ARCHITECTURE

One-story, wing-and-gable plan frame house with single, multi-light casement windows behind wood screens; prominent eave brackets. The original front porch of the house has been enclosed.

RESEARCH

The house appears to date from 1911; the first occupant was Sidney E. Donnelly and his family, who lived here until around 1916. Sidney E. Donnelly worked for Western Union, and moved here from Gainesville, Texas. From Austin, he moved to El Paso to follow his career. The house appears to have been a rental property for its entire existence. There was a high turnover of tenants in the 1910s and early 1920s until the house was rented by Fletcher and Hattie Randerson, and their children. Fletcher Randerson was advanced in years by the time he moved into this house; he was a retired farmer. Hattie Randerson had been a music teacher when the family lived in Hays County. While in Austin, she hosted gatherings of study clubs and other organizations at this house. After Fletcher's death in 1933, Hattie continued to live here with some of her children until she moved to a house on Lorrain Street around 1950. One of her daughters, who lived in this house with her the longest, was Irene Randerson, a noted Austin public school teacher.

The house was converted to a duplex around 1950, and to a triplex in the early 1960s. The rear house was constructed in 1955, and also served as a rental property. In 1991, the house was converted to church use; St. Francis Episcopal Church is located here today.

STAFF COMMENTS

The church building is contributing to the West Line Historic District.

STAFF RECOMMENDATION

Encourage rehabilitation and adaptive re-use, as this building retains enough of its integrity of form to identify it as a building from the turn of the century. If the Commission votes to release the permit, then staff recommends relocation over demolition, and completion of a City of Austin Documentation Package, consisting of photographs of all elevations, a dimensioned sketch plan, and a narrative history, for archiving at the Austin History Center.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTES

Sidney and Mattie Donnelly (ca. 1911 – ca. 1913)

The 1910 U.S. Census shows Sidney and Mattie Donnelly living in Gainesville, Texas, where Sidney E. Donnelly was a telegrapher for Western Union. He was 45, and had been born in the United States to a Kentucky-born father and a New York-born mother. Mattie Donnelly, 42, was born in Texas to a Maine-born father and an Alabama-born mother. She had no occupation listed. They had 3 children: Martha, 17; Leo, 15; and Mark, 12. All three children had been born in Texas, and none had an occupation listed. Sidney Donnelly moved to El Paso, Texas around 1914. He is listed in the El Paso city directory of 1914 as the printer chief for Western Union there.

William and Georgia Chancellor (ca. 1919 – ca. 1921)

The 1920 U.S. Census shows William A. and Georgia A. Chancellor as the renters of this house. William A. Chancellor was 61, had been born in Texas, and was a house carpenter. Georgia A. Chancellor was 45, had been born in Louisiana, and had no occupation listed. They had 2 children: Thelma, 21, who had been born in Texas, and was a stenographer at the State Capitol, and George Guy, 14, who had been born in California. With them lived Georgia Chancellor's mother, Ellen Grayson, a 72-year old Mississippi-born widow with no occupation listed. The Chancellors also had a boarder, Olivette Barbour, a 25-year old Texas-born widow who was a saleslady at a drug store.

Fletcher and Hattie Randerson (ca. 1921 – ca. 1950)

Fletcher and Hattie Randerson appear in the 1900 U.S. Census for Travis County, where he is listed as a farmer. The 1910 U.S. Census shows the Randersons living in rural Hays County, Texas, where Fletcher was a farmer, and Hattie was a music teacher.

The 1920 U.S. Census shows Fletcher and Hattie Randerson living at 804 Patterson Avenue, a house they rented. Fletcher Randerson was 74, had been born in Ohio to an English-born father and an American-born mother, and had no occupation listed. Hattie Randerson was 48, had been born in Tennessee to an Ohio-born father, and a Tennessee-born mother. She had no occupation listed. Listed with them are their 6 children: L.B. Randerson, 26, a clerk at the Post Office, and his wife, Dimple, 25; Robert Randerson, 22, a salesman for an oil company; William Randerson, 18, a clerk in a bakery; Kathryn Randerson, 14; Irene Randerson, 13; and Emma Ruth Randerson, 8. All of the children had been born in Texas. L.B. and Dimple Randerson had 2 children: Luther W., 2, and Elizabeth, 1.

Fletcher and Hattie Randerson appear in the 1930 U.S. Census as the renters of this house. Fletcher Randerson was 85, had been born in Ohio to an English-born father and a Pennsylvania-born mother, and had no occupation listed. Hattie Randerson, 58, had been born in Tennessee to an Ohio-born father and a Tennessee-born mother. She had no occupation listed. With them lived a daughter, Emma R. Randerson, 18, who had been born in Texas and had no occupation listed.

Fletcher Randerson died December 8, 1933 while living in this house. His death certificate shows that he was born in 1845 in Ohio, and was retired.

Austin Statesman-UPI
MISS IRENE RANDESON, TEACHER
". . . Teenagers are smarter now."

Ambition Achieved By Austin Teacher

By ANITA BREWER

She was a shy child herself, so it is the shy student—the timid, the bashful—that Miss Irene Randerson can't help but love.

Miss Randerson, mathematics teacher at William B. Travis High School, is the winner of the "out-standing" teacher award of $250 given by the Austin Kiwanis Club.

When she was a little girl, Miss Randerson said her ambition was to teach mathematics in Austin High School.

"I never wanted to be anything but a teacher," she says. "To me that was better than being a movie star or an artist. Better than anything."

Miss Randerson borrowed money to go to the University of Texas and to buy her clothes. When she graduated in 1928, she felt overwhelmed by debts. But she had a job—teaching at Mason for $90 a month.

"That seemed like so much money to me," she remembers.

Part of the enjoyment she receives from teaching is her subject. Figures have always danced in her head.

"My father liked arithmetic," she says. "He didn't have much formal schooling, but he could work any problem we children brought home."

It seemed to give her dad especial pleasure that his little brown-eyed girl shared his enthusiasm for problem-solving.

But it's the youngsters that give her the most joy.

"I believe teenagers now are better than at any other time," she says. "They are smarter. They know more. They understand more."

She believes that the modern world's wonderful communications—which she wouldn't change—are responsible for the bad name teenagers have in many quarters.

"For example," she says, "if a teenager in New York does something wrong, the whole world knows about it by night fall. When I was a girl, we would never have heard about it."

Miss Randerson organized the Student Council at William B. Travis High School, and she enjoys working with the students in their government activities.

Through the extra-curricular work as well as class work, she gets to know the boys and girls and their problems.

One time a yell leader didn't have enough money to go to the out-of-town football games. Miss Randerson slipped money to the school counselor for the girl. And she has gathered clothes from her friends and family to give to children who have little.

Her brown eyes are still shining with happiness that the Kiwanis award brought with it. Her only regret:

"I wish my mother were still here to enjoy it. She was always clipping stories out of the paper and sending them to her friends. She would have so enjoyed clipping out these stories."

Besides letters from her ex-students and old friends, Miss Randerson has received letters from friends of her mother.

"I guess it's always a triumph for a mother when her children receive honors.

"And that's the way with a teacher. I feel honored when my students do well."

Story on Irene Randerson
 Austin Statesman, March 13, 1959

The house appears on the 1922 Sanborn map, the first to show this section of the city. The house has a wraparound front porch and a smaller footprint than shown on the 1935 map below.

The 1935 Sanborn map shows an extended porch and addition to the east of the house that were not reflected on the 1922 map above.

The 1961 Sanborn map shows the house divided into 3 apartments. The map shows the same configuration as the 1935 map above.
