

HISTORIC LANDMARK COMMISSION
JUNE 25, 2018
DEMOLITION AND RELOCATION PERMITS
HDP-2018-0211
2400 CANTERBURY STREET

PROPOSAL

Demolish a ca. 1938 house.

ARCHITECTURE

One-story, rectangular-plan, side-gabled frame house with a central, partial-width independent porch on bracketed wood posts with a metal balustrade railing above; three front-gabled dormers pierce the front roof, each with a pair of 1:1 windows; single and paired 1:1 fenestration.

RESEARCH

The house was built in 1938 for John G. and Gertrude Roos, who lived here until around 1953. John G. Roos was a baker, who worked at several commercial bakeries in Austin, including Paulissen (Uncle Walt's) Baking Company, Shults Baking Company, Gilbert's Baking Company, and Austin Baking Company (Butter Krust bread).

From around 1953 until the mid-1960s, the house was owned and occupied by Leonard and Ruth Yocum. Leonard Yocum was a driver for the Southern Pacific Transport Company, a division of the Southern Pacific Railroad.

Following the Yocums' occupancy, the house was owned and occupied by Geronimo ("Jerry") and Connie Castilleja. Jerry Castilleja was a gas station attendant; Connie Castilleja was a meat wrapper for a wholesale meat company. After they divorced in 1972, Connie Castilleja continued to live in this house. She is believed to have married Salvador ("John") Rodriguez, a construction worker in 1980; they are listed as the owners and occupants of the house in the late 1980s and early 1990s. There is a Connie Castilleja who was living in Fort Worth in the mid-1990s.

STAFF COMMENTS

The house is recommended as eligible for local landmark designation by the East Austin Historical Survey (2016).

Staff has evaluated this house for designation as a historic landmark and has determined that the house meets the criterion for architectural significance, but there is still a question as to whether it meets the criterion for historical associations as set forth in City Code:

- a. Architecture. The house is a late 1930s frame cottage with unusual architectural features that set it apart from other houses of the same era and archetype, specifically, the triple dormers across the front and the treatment of the front porch, which are rare for this style of house, and especially rare in East Austin. Staff believes that the architectural features of this house distinguish to such an extent that it qualifies for designation as a historic landmark under the criterion for architecture.
- b. Historical association. The house was owned by three families over the course of its history: the first was a baker in commercial bakeries, the second, a driver for the trucking division of the railroad, and the third, a gas station attendant. More research is going to be necessary to determine the historical significance, if any, of this house.

- c. Archaeology. The house was not evaluated for its potential to yield significant data concerning the human history or prehistory of the region.
- d. Community value. The house does not possess a unique location, physical characteristic, or significant feature that contributes to the character, image, or cultural identity of the city, the neighborhood, or a particular demographic group.
- e. Landscape feature. The property is not a significant natural or designed landscape with artistic, aesthetic, cultural, or historical value to the city.

Staff is aware that the house has been vacant for some time and has suffered some deterioration and water damage. A house mover has evaluated the house and has stated that the house is not a good candidate for restoration, rehabilitation, or relocation:

Steve, I am following up on our talk yesterday. As always, I can not and do not support the demolition of any historic house or the destruction of there historic places. That said, I have seen and evaluated 2400 Canterbury St. I really wanted to buy and move that house, but it is not a candidate for relocation. The House has good vintage appeal from the Street. However, it does have significant water damage thus some real roof cave in, all the way threw the house. I do not write you about condition. I'm writing about the houses interior, and it's candidacy for relocation. The interior has been threw several change ups, and redo's and it's significant is simply gone. Actually, the owner who lives in the redone old house next door loves and is a trusted keeper of old houses, more than one- and he can not make this house work. The issue with relocation, is not at all uncommon of the period, regardless of condition. Because of it's height and there cross gable lay out. To move the house you must lower the roof to the ceiling plates. Thus you loose all of the 1/2 story interior, and its windows. Exteriorly, you loose and wont reuse, the little dormers. The little ornamental "weep railing" must also come off. Most likely would have to center cut threw the house into two halves, which alone is not uncommon, and can commonly be cost justified, as well as lowering roofs, or even both. Unfortunately, with these houses the extra move cost, cant be supported by low square footage. Cost aside, in this case you loose all of its vintage significant's, and your down to a wood box. I would not be recommending the relocation of this house. I don't think Jr. Brown would let a client move it, if so, I would move it. Regardless, I always appreciate and support your decision.

Thank you,

Warren Wellborn

STAFF RECOMMENDATION

Postpone to July 23, 2018 to fully review the history of this house, as well as to evaluate alternatives to demolition of the house. If the Commission decides to release the permit, then staff recommends completion of a City of Austin Documentation Package, consisting of photographs of all elevations, a dimensioned sketch plan, and a narrative history, for archiving at the Austin History Center.
