

Mobility Justice: People Power and the Future of Urban Transportation

Saturday, January 12, 2019

10:30 AM - Noon (doors open at 10 AM)

Asian American Resource Center Ballroom, 8401 Cameron Rd, Austin TX 78754

2 minute walk from Cameron/Park Center Transit Stop, on CapMetro Bus Route 325

SPEAKER:

Dr. Adonia E. Lugo PhD. (Affiliate Faculty in Urban Sustainability, Antioch University Los Angeles) is an urban anthropologist, bicyclist, activist, and college professor living in Los Angeles. She's spent the last decade researching racial inclusion in active transportation. Her book, Bicycle/Race: Transportation, Culture, & Resistance, was published in 2018. Dr. Lugo serves as an advisory board co-chair for Los Angeles-based community-based organization People for Mobility Justice and is a core organizer of The Untokening, a national collective Mobility Justice is one of the crucial political and ethical issues of our day in the midst of a global climate crisis and the extreme challenges of urbanization.*

Please join us as we welcome Dr. Lugo, who will share her work on building a movement called "mobility justice," the practice of accounting for the diverse vulnerabilities that individuals carry with them as they travel through shared public spaces. How can cities, including Austin, use mobility justice to guide future investment in transportation systems? What is Austin doing right now to offer more affordable mobility options for vulnerable populations and communities?

This event is free and open to the public.

* Quote by Mimi Sheller, Mobility Justice: The Politics of Movement in the Age of Extremes. 2018

Photo by Nathan Wilkes

This event is sponsored by:

Planning & Zoning
Department

austintexas.gov/speakerseries