DEMOLITION AND RELOCATION PERMITS
PR-20-183612
1601 BRACKENRIDGE STREET

PROPOSAL

Demolish a ca. 1915 house.

ARCHITECTURE

One-and-a-half story, rectangular-plan, side-gabled frame Craftsman bungalow with a central, partial-width, front-gabled dormer; single, paired, and triple fenestration in 1:1, 6:1, and 9:1 patterns; exterior brick chimney. It appears that the original front porch of the house was infilled, and that the windows currently on the front of the house were the original windows before the porch was infilled.

Staff has reviewed the structural report for the house. While there are significant structural issues, staff argues that the house can be salvaged.

RESEARCH

The house appears to have been built around 1915 by William M. and Lettie Webster Davis, both teachers at the Texas School for the Deaf. Lettie Webster Davis was originally from Grayson County, Texas, and moved to Austin around 1903. She first boarded with noted deaf teacher William H. Davis, at his home on Newning Avenue (a city historic landmark). She married William M. Davis, a teacher in the manual department of the deaf institute, in 1911, and four years later either built or moved in to this house on Brackenridge Street, where they lived until William passed away in 1947 after a close-to-40-year career in deaf education. After his death, Lettie Davis moved to a house on Oakland Avenue in West Austin, across the street from her family's home, where her sisters still resided.

Both William and Lettie Davis taught at the Deaf School during a time of great upheaval in the methods of teaching deaf students and successfully adapted their teaching methods accordingly. As educators moved away from sign language in favor of "oralism" - reliance on lip reading, many deaf teachers were replaced with hearing teachers. Students who did not succeed with the oralist approach to deaf education were sent to the "manual" department, where they were taught to spell with their fingers. Both William Davis and Lettie Webster Davis came from families that devoted their careers and lives to deaf education. Lettie Davis' sister, Jessie Webster, was one of the longest-tenured instructors at the institution.

After William M. Davis' death, and Lettie Davis' move back to her old neighborhood in West Austin, this house had a series of owner-occupants through the mid-1950s. Betsy Pinkerton opened Betsy's Nursery School and Kindergarten in this house around 1955; it operated here until around 1970. Another nursery school and kindergarten, Gingerbread House, operated by Edyth S. Simpson, was located here until the house became a Montessori School in the mid-1980s. The house was used as a Montessori School until recently.

STAFF COMMENTS

The house is listed as contributing to the pending Travis Heights-Fairview Park National Register Historic District.

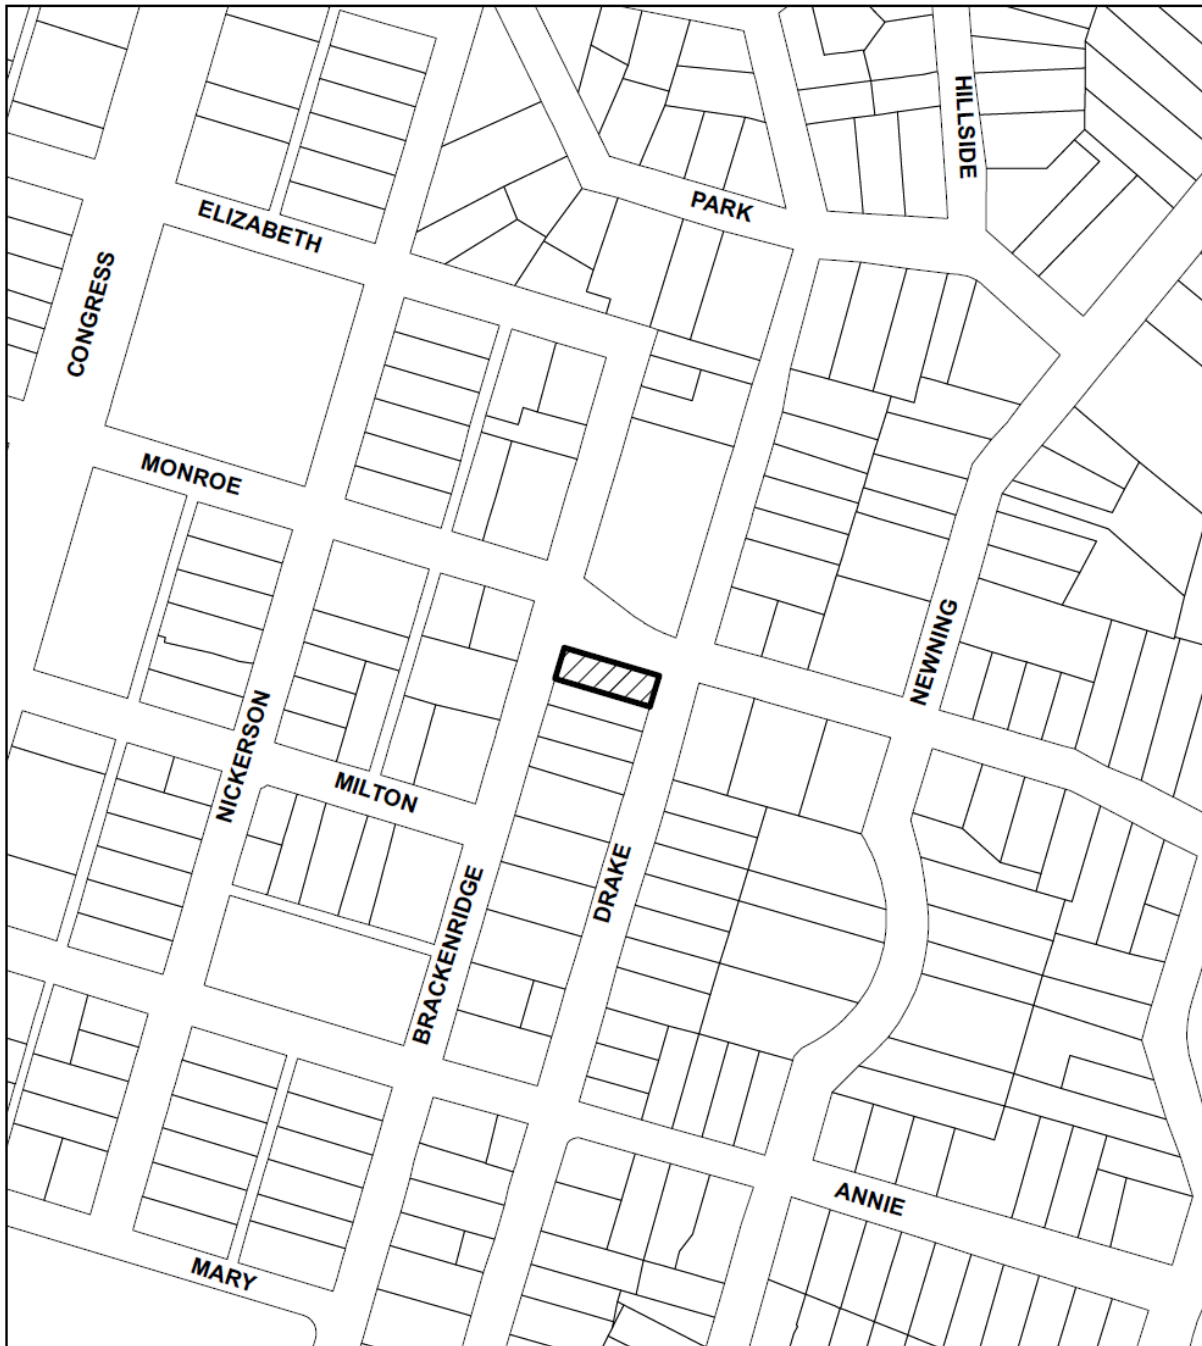

Staff has evaluated this house for designation as a historic landmark and has determined that the house may meet the criteria for landmark designation as set forth in City Code:

- a. Architecture. The house is an excellent example of an early Craftsman bungalow which retains a high degree of integrity. The front porch of the house has been filled in for additional living space, but it appears that this occurred during the historic period, and may have relocated windows from the front wall of the house to the new infilled wall; windows or vents in the central dormer have been covered with plywood, and the back of the house has been modified with a series of glass doors opening onto a back patio, deck, and play area. The house appears to meet the criterion for architectural significance.
- b. Historical association. The house was built by and was the long-time home of two prominent teachers at what is now the Texas School for the Deaf; there do appear to be significant historical associations.
- c. Archaeology. The house was not evaluated for its potential to yield significant data concerning the human history or prehistory of the region.
- d. Community value. The house does not possess a unique location, physical characteristic, or significant feature that contributes to the character, image, or cultural identity of the city, the neighborhood, or a particular demographic group.
- e. Landscape feature. The property is not a significant natural or designed landscape with artistic, aesthetic, cultural, or historical value to the city.

STAFF RECOMMENDATION

Recommend historic zoning. If the Commission instead votes to release the permit, then staff recommends the completion of a City of Austin Documentation Package, consisting of photographs of all elevations, a dimensioned sketch plan, and a narrative history, for archiving at the Austin History Center.

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTES:

William M. and Lettie Davis (ca. 1915 – ca. 1947)

W.M. Davis married Lettie R. Webster in Travis County on June 14, 1911.

W.M. and Lettie Webster Davis are noted in an article in the March 8, 1914 Austin Statesman as teachers at the Texas School for the Deaf. W.M. Davis was a teacher in the high school department; Lettie Webster Davis was a teacher in the primary department.

His 1918 World War I draft registration card shows that William Martin Davis was living at this address at the time of his registration. He was born in 1874 and was a teacher at the State School for the Deaf. Lettie W. Davis was his wife. He was tall, and had a slender build; he had dark brown hair and light blue eyes. The draft registration card shows that he was deaf and dumb.

William M. and Lillie [sic] Davis are listed as the owners of this house in the 1920 U.S. Census. William M. Davis was 44, had been born in Texas to a Mississippi-born father and an Alabama-born mother, and was a teacher at the School for the Deaf. Lillie [sic] Davis was 39, had been born in Texas to Alabama-born parents, and had no occupation listed. They had no children listed with them.

The 1930 U.S. Census shows William M. and Kittie [sic] W. Davis as the owners of this house, which was worth $5,000. William M. Davis was 54, had been born in Texas to Alabama-born parents, and was a teacher at the Deaf School. Kittie [sic] W. Davis was 50, had been born in Missouri to a New York-born father and a Missouri-born mother, and was also a teacher at the Deaf School. They had no children listed with them.

William Martin Davis was living in this house at the time of his death in 1947. He was born in 1875 in Hill County, Texas and was a retired teacher at the School for the Deaf.

DAVIS: William M. Davis, 72, died early Friday morning at his residence, 1601 Brackenridge Street. Davis had been a resident of Austin for the past sixty years, having taught in the School for the Deaf until his retirement a few years ago. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Lettie W. Davis.

Funeral services will be held from the Cook Funeral Home at 2 p. m. Saturday with the Rev. Flynn Long officiating. Active pallbearers will be Seth Crockett, Homer Thornberry, W. H. Martin, R. L. Davis, Charles Burney and William Bruns. Monorary pallbearers will be Jr. W. Blattner, Roger Powell, R. M. Rives, Douglas Johnson, O. L. McIntyre, and William Anderson. Burial will be in Oakwood Cemetery.

Obituary of William M. Davis
