

Photos of South Central Waterfront

As it currently exists: Photos taken at 7pm on Sunday, August 21, 2022.

Congress

This is the Statesman site, viewed from the Congress Bridge.

Access by Path

This looks down a public path alongside the Statesman parking lot, toward the bat-viewing area.

Current view, walking North on Congress.

Merlin Tomlin Doy
August 26th

Skyscraper goes here.

The 305 S. Congress PUD plans a skyscraper here, to the right of the walk, with parking below so the building begins at street level.

Current stairs

As evident, there are two access points at this location, these stairs and the path in the previous slide.

Entrances

Again, the building will supplant these two public accesses to the park and trail.

Bike access moves South

Under this PUD, bikes coming from the Congress Bridge would have to travel to Barton Springs Road, at the end of this block (where the stoplight is).

Road and bike access

The PUD will channel bikes to a two-way bike lane along the extended Barton Springs Road, at this location, about $\frac{1}{4}$ mile from the bat area, behind the current Statesman building.

Current access

On the back side of the Statesman is an extensive lot that allows a wide pedestrian access to the trail, besides a specific trail entry point.

7 pm Sunday

Bat-watchers arrive on a random Sunday evening. This park is a beloved spot for locals and tourists alike.