Additional Backup Information:

In October 2020, recognizing the increasing pressures of rising real estate prices on affordability, equity, and the City's iconic venues and small businesses, the City of Austin created Austin Economic Development Corporation (AEDC). Statutorily established under Chapter 431 Texas Transportation Code, Chapter 394 Texas Local Government Code and the Texas Nonprofit Corporation Law, the corporation is organized for the purpose of aiding and acting on behalf of the City in the performance of the City's governmental functions to accomplish any governmental purpose of the City. AEDC is structured broadly enough to manage a range of projects, which could include affordable housing development, public-private partnerships with private-led development, working for purpose instead of profits.

The fully autonomous corporation is governed by a "blue-ribbon" board consisting of 20 voting-members who are nominated by the City and other external agencies in the community. Each nominating body is asked to provide up to three nominations meeting the description of the subject matter area, qualifications and skill sets for an ideal nominee. Criteria includes a strong background, understanding and familiarity of the nominating organization and the community the nominating organization serves and each representative must possess demonstrable skills and experience in the areas of industry, public/private partnerships, infrastructure or transportation, real estate development or construction, urban/regional planning, historic preservation, finance, creative and music industry, minority and women-owned businesses (MWBE), and/or workforce. The City Council will consider the nomination(s) and confirm a single selected candidate by majority vote.

This resolution is needed due to the resignation of three members of AEDC.
